

Ontology and butchery practices: a new look at prehistoric anthropology

Sandrine Costamagno & Clément Birouste

Lundi 21 octobre - Maison de la Recherche salle D30

Public session exclusively in the morning

9h00

Clément Birouste : Workshop Introduction

9h15

Ran Barkaï : Technological persistency versus faunal stability during the Pleistocene: An Ontological perspective

9h40

Clément Birouste et Sandrine Costamagno : Beyond economics? An insight in the Magdalenian butchery

10h05

Nick Overton : Using Social Zooarchaeology to examine human-nonhuman relationships, and their material consequences, in Mesolithic Europe

10h20 - Pause

10h45

Rose-Marie Arbogast : Butchering, processing, sharing animal carcasses in neolithic societies from the upper Rhine valley

11h15

Christian Jeunesse : Le « proto-élevage », une forme spécifique et un stade historique de la relation humain – animal ?

11h40

Charles Stepanoff : The raven's bone: outline of a butchery ontology in Medieval hunting practices

12h05

Adrian Tanner : The Sacred Aspect of Butchering among Cree Hunters

12h30 : Discussion

14h15 – 17h00 : Working session

